

Hello FINRA

It looks like I missed the time for comments on the proposed CARDS plan, but I am very opposed to it so I want to give feedback anyway.

I do not want FINRA collecting my account transactions and account data.

I do not believe the CARDS plan would protect or help me in any way.

Saying the data would be protected and/or not personally identifiable does not change my opinion at all.

I think this is a power grab by people who want big data to play with, but it is MY data they want.

The companies that actually process my transactions need to have the information, and I have to report capital gains and losses to the IRS. Other than that, NO ONE should know what I do with my own money in my own account.

The basis for my objection is IT IS NONE OF YOUR BUSINESS.

Sincerely,

Sara Hitchens
Individual investor